

YOUNG SCHOLAR PROGRAM

iPoly's Young Scholar Program is a joint effort between iPoly High School and Cal Poly University, Pomona, to offer college courses to our junior and senior high school students. iPoly students have the unique opportunity to attend academic classes and work with faculty members on the University.

Benefits

- Enhancement of the iPoly curriculum and its global and academic perspective.
- A jump-start in obtaining college units and completing college-level General Education (GE) courses.
- Opportunity to explore a variety of courses to introduce students to college majors and/or career options.

Participation in this program also provides students the unique opportunity of “the college experience” in a manner that still feels safe for the student.

iPoly students are not given preferential treatment, but are instead treated like the other college students; they are therefore required to plan ahead, and when their options are no longer available, learn to find alternative solutions. This type of experience is not one that is available to most high school students, but is one that teaches our students methods of success for college.

We encourage all students who seek academic challenges to participate in the Young Scholar Program.

Requirements

Cal Poly Young Scholar Program participants must maintain a 10-12th grade minimum academic GPA of 3.0 at iPoly. As it is a university program, students must provide a social security number in order to be admitted to the program.
